- 1) Did the message challenge how you think about the forgiveness of sins in any particular way, and if so, how?
- 2) Why do you think that we are prone to gravitate towards an individualized understanding of how we live the Christian life? Why is this understanding so harmful for God’s people?
- 3) In the message, there were three ways given that we shouldn’t respond to our sin (see below), and out of these, which one are you the most prone to, and why?
  - a) Deflect It
  - b) Minimize It
  - c) Just Saying “You’re Sorry” About It
- 4) How does the reality of our sinfulness, and the work of Christ’s redemption expose our wrong responses, and lead us to the right response?
- 5) How does the cooperation of the Father and Son in the mission to secure our forgiveness prompt your heart to respond?
